

Chapter Sixteen

FLIGHT NURSE

SAN FRANCISCO, the war's glamour city, is not only the port of embarkation for overseas but the home of its own flight school it sent the two selected nurses to the army air evacuation school at Bowman Field, Kentucky, the first of its kind in the world, which had trained and sent out more than a thousand army nurses since the beginning of the war. These two girls are the only navy nurses who wear the army wings.

The nurses who were to represent the United States in cal training at the Compo dos Alfonsos, the handsome and
